SingHealth Residency Programme

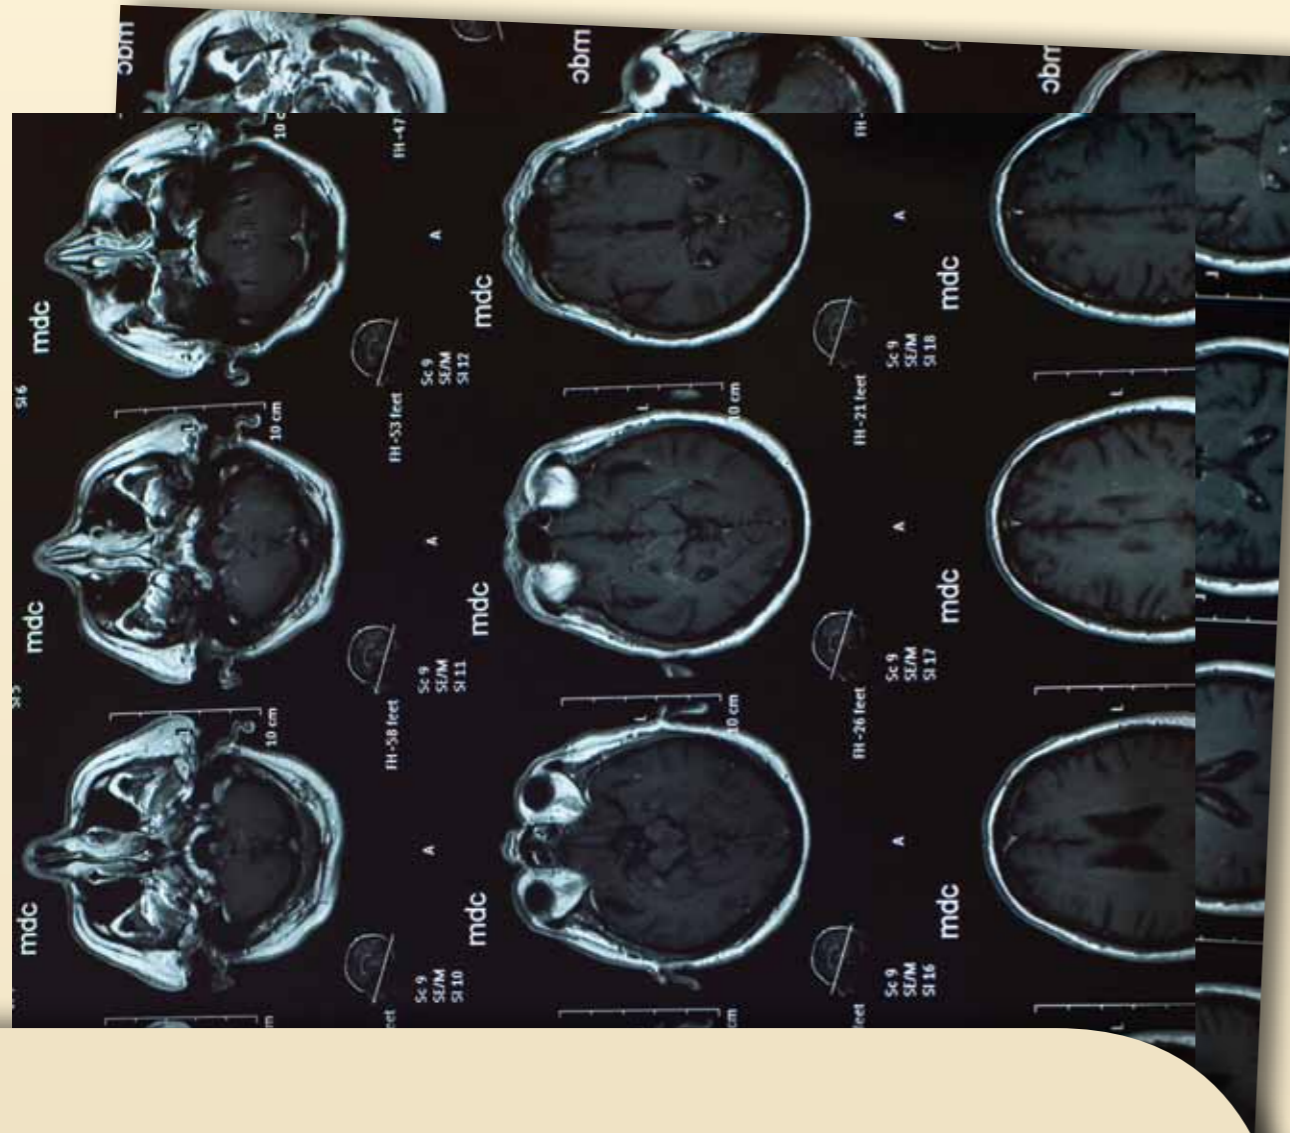

Changi General Hospital

CONFIDENTIAL

Major Participating Site:

Case 01: “Qualitat Teachingus Environmentus”

Patient Particulars:

Medical student looking for a quality learning environment to hone skills and knowledge with the help of committed mentors.

Diagnosis:

Adverse reaction to overly high student-to-teacher ratios, overly staid or regimented teaching modalities, or lack of sufficient supervision or accountability.

Suggested Treatment:

The Changi General Hospital Residency Programme

Procedures Involved:

- lower student-to-teacher ratio
- learning faculty prioritising education and dedicated learning time & environment
- closely knit cohort with relatively ‘high-touch’ mentor-student relationships
- varied teaching modalities including simulation labs, group discussions, patient-focused bedside learning and didactic mini-lectures

Clinicians involved:

Teaching faculty comprising both locally and internationally renowned clinician-teachers with wealth of clinical, teaching and research experience.

Comments:

In the midst of busy daily routine, our consultants never fail to recognise our potential and always encourage us towards higher standards. The enthusiasm in individual supervision is also unparalleled - our seniors will always spare moments in between their hectic schedules to provide supervision.

Dr Tan Sheng Neng,
Psychiatry Trainee at CGH

Case 02:
“Specialisationis Opportunitus”

Patient Particulars:

Medical student seeking refreshing diversity of specialisation options to choose from and work in.

Diagnosis:

Allergy to limited, stifling inflexible specialisation environments or uninspiring range of cases to deal with.

Suggested Treatment:

The Changi General Hospital Residency Programme

Procedures involved:

- surprisingly wide range of locally and internationally acknowledged clinical specialities
- expertise areas include Gastroenterology, Endocrinology, Vascular, Emergency Medicine, Orthopaedics, Trauma, Dermatology, Anaesthesiology, Disaster Medicine, Sports Medicine, Radiology, Psychological Medicine, Pathology
- comprehensive span of patient case-mixes that allow Residents to gain varied perspectives & experience in their training journey and contribute to new research areas

Clinicians involved:

Renowned clinician-mentors, many of whom have pioneered clinical specialities in CGH and contributed to the wealth of opportunities available.

Comments:

Not only did I have the chance to manage bread-and-butter cases for Internal Medicine, but was also exposed to conditions from various sub-specialities such as respiratory medicine, gastroenterology and endocrinology, especially under the guidance of impressive mentors from the various sub-specialities. They taught me medical knowledge and acumen that could not be learnt from books, and also instilled in me the value of thoroughness in one's work. With their guidance, I cultivated the habit of critical thinking for problem solving, and most importantly, the heart of dedication to one's patients.

Dr Serene Thain
House Officer at CGH

Case 03:
“Collegialis Culturalus”

Patient Particulars:

Medical student who believes that an organisation's colleagues and culture are important components of a complete work environment.

Diagnosis:

A disposition that contraindicates a fragmented, work-only environment with poor relationship foundations.

Suggested Treatment:

The Changi General Hospital Residency Programme

Procedures Involved:

- strong collegial culture evidenced by camaraderie and cohesiveness amongst colleagues
- emphasis on well-rounded and nurturing training experience providing holistic, competitive and ideal learning environment for every Resident, and solid teamwork focused on service for patients
- arguably unmatched vibrant campus with intentional and strong emphasis placed on social well-being and work-life balance, facilitating lasting friendships

Clinicians involved:

Nurturing tutors and friendly colleagues and mentors who enjoy their work in CGH and are eager to welcome new Residents into the family.

Comments:

The rigorous training served to build a strong foundation for my future rotations, and at the same time the social and emotional support that I received from my fellow housemen and seniors made my 'Changi experience' all the more memorable.

Internal Medicine Resident at CGH

YOUR CAREER.

OUR PURPOSE.

Changi General Hospital is Singapore's first regional acute hospital and a reputable postgraduate medical training institution. Our Residency Programme offers a well-rounded, stimulating learning experience underpinned by a quality learning environment, a wealth of specialisation opportunities and a collegial work-life culture.

We promise a vibrant, inspiring and nurturing training journey for every Resident coming to CGH!

A QUALITY LEARNING EXPERIENCE

In CGH, our clinician-mentors strongly believe in a protected time for lessons and emphasise the creation of a dedicated learning environment. With a relatively low student-mentor ratio in every training session and a properly sized and closely-knit cohort, there is a high level of supervision and accountability between medical officers.

A WEALTH OF SPECIALISATION OPPORTUNITIES

The range of services and specialities offered by CGH presents a refreshing diversity of choice for every Resident. CGH's distinguished clinical expertise areas include Gastroenterology, Endocrinology, Vascular, Emergency Medicine, Orthopaedics, Trauma, Dermatology, Anaesthesiology, Disaster Medicine, Sports Medicine, Radiology, Psychological Medicine and Pathology, among others.

A COLLEGIAL CULTURE

In CGH, colleagues are united by a strong sense of common purpose. This collective sense of service and purpose for our patients is what we pride ourselves on. We work relentlessly as a team to focus on providing a holistic, healthily competitive and ideal learning environment for every Resident. Apart from that, CGH has many recreational facilities which help encourage bonding and work-life balance. CGH is a place where lasting friendships can be built and developed.
